ABOUT ME

I am a recent graduate of Addis Ababa University, where I specialized in web and application development as an IT student. Throughout my four years of study, I have developed a strong passion for creating captivating websites, games, and applications using a variety of programming languages and technologies such as Python, JavaScript, HTML, CSS, and React.

In addition to my expertise in web and application development, I have gained professional experience working with advanced technologies such as React, React Native, Node.js, Express.js, and PostgreSQL. I have successfully delivered impactful projects, including building a company website, an e-commerce platform, and my personal portfolio website. I take great pride in delivering high-quality work and continuously strive to learn and stay updated with emerging technologies to provide innovative solutions.
